Charlie was certain that he had found something, but was completely baffled as to where it vanished! Or had it!

Chapter 4 by Feodor

He sat down in the dirt, and pulled out his trusty notepad.

'Object #309:

Green.

About the length of a pencil.

About the width of a average springer spaniel.

Dematerialised in hand.

Shiney.

4 feet down.

Brownly Farm, Dunkeryl.

Charlie Brownly.'

Charlie was hopeful that writing everything he had seen down, would help him unravel this mystery.

He had read that this works in his latest collectors issue of 'Rinlé Does Science'

That night, Charlie got out his notebook again.

He remembered something,

A face.
